DESCRIPTION

A roughly L-shaped stone building with a central dominant 2-story octagonal core with 1-story wings. Corner entry through double doors leads to central circulation space in octagon which has a low pitched roof. Wings are flat-roofed, concealed behind parapets and feature vigas, non-structural round log beams, projecting through stone wall. Wall are coursed, roughly-squared stone, with cast stone sills and parapet caps. Windows are steel casements with steel lintels. Entrances are protected by minimal flat and sloped roof additions. The stonework, vigas and relatively small openings show Rustic influences.

SIGNIFICANCE

Built between 1927 and 1930, the pool represents an important effort by the city to improve municipal services during a time of unprecedented economic growth. It performed a social function of attracting residents to congregate under informal circumstances, an important service in a community experiencing rapid demographic changes. It remains in use today. The pool house features Rustic stylistic influences, an unusual style in San Angelo.
