Oscar Lindsay House Houston, Harris County, Texas

Description

The Oscar Lindsay House (c. 1920) is a 1-story bungalow facing east on North Main in Independence Heights. A large gable roof with jerkinhead front and side gables covers the house which is set on concrete piers. An inset front porch is supported by decorative iron columns resting on a concrete foundation. The house is surrounded by mixed commercial, institutional, and residential uses. Mature vegetation of deciduous trees is north of the house.

The Oscar Lindsay House (c. 1920) faces east on the principal thoroughfare of Independence Heights, North Main Street. The 1-story bungalow rests on a foundation of concrete piers and is covered with a large gable roof of asphalt shingles. The house is sheathed in asbestos shingles (date unknown) but is otherwise largely intact. The front and side are distinguished with jerkinhead gables. Commercial, institutional, and residential uses surround the house reflecting the typical mix of activities in Independence Heights. Directly across the street is the General Mercantile Store or Burgess Hall. Mature deciduous trees and planting shade the house and front and rear yards. A graveled driveway leads from the street to the rear of the property along southern side of the lot. No outbuildings exist.

The 3-bay principal (east) facade consists of paired 1/1 windows in the first and third bays and a single wooden door in the center bay. Access to the primary entrance is under an inset porch supported by two decorative iron columns set on a concrete foundation.

The 3-bay south facade is noted by a set of double windows in the first and third bays and triple windows in the center. All windows are 1/1 wooden sashes that appear to be original.

The Lindsay House is in good condition with alterations that appear to date to the period of significance.

Statement of Significance

The Oscar Lindsay House (c. 1920) is one of the most intact properties associated with an important businessman and city official of Independence Heights. Lindsay operated a number of businesses in the community during the period of significance as well as overlapping as one of three city officials. The property is eligible under Criterion A in the area of Ethnic Heritage (black) at the local level of significance.

The Oscar Lindsay House is near the center of Independence Heights on North Main Street and the home of local businessman and city official. Lindsay operated a number of small businesses in the community including a cleaning and pressing shop, barber sop and ice cream parlor. He set up and managed the ice cream business in his front yard thereby taking advantage of the location on the community's busiest thoroughfare. In addition, Lindsay served as the city plumber for Independence Heights providing an essential service to local residents. This position was one of three public workers supported by the City of Independence Heights on a regular basis (the others were sanitation worker and water commissioner).

Oscar Lindsay worked in a number of vocations which seem to have overlapped during the period of significance. Based on the documentation available, this was common for many residents of Independence Heights and possibly contemporary African American neighborhoods in Houston. Black business owners often operated a number of businesses at once usually requiring low overhead and small capital investments (SoRelle, in Black Dixie, pp. 103-112).

The Lindsay House represents the early ethnic heritage of Independence Heights and is one of the only remaining buildings associated with a city official.
